

Groningen Journal of International Law (GroJIL)

Author Guide

1. Publishing Profile

The Groningen Journal of International Law is not a traditional journal, which means that the articles we accept are not traditional either. We invite writers to focus on what the law could be or should be, and to apply their creativity in presenting solutions, models and theories that in their view would strengthen the role and effectiveness of international law, however it may come to be defined. To this end, the Journal requires its authors to submit articles written in an exploratory and non-descriptive style.

The Groningen Journal of International Law is a non-peer reviewed publication. If authors wish their contributions to be peer-reviewed, the Journal is able to accommodate such request.

2. Submissions

All manuscripts should be submitted via email to board@grojil.org

3. Submission Guidelines

- All manuscripts should be submitted electronically, in word format via email
- Manuscripts should generally be between 7000 and 15.000 words
- Articles may not have been published or be under consideration for publication elsewhere.
- Only articles in English can be considered for publication. The Journal has a general preference for 'ise' and 'isation' instead of 'ize' and 'ization' with the exception of quotations where the original spelling should be maintained. American authors may also submit articles that deviate from this policy.
- Every article should be accompanied by a short abstract of 200-400 words.
- A short bibliographical note, specifying the author's current affiliation and e-mail address should be provided in the first footnote.

4. Citation style

The GroJIL uses its house style that is largely based on the Oxford University Standard for the Citation of Legal Authorities. Prospective authors may submit papers that use any legal referencing style. The GroJIL editorial team provides the service of reformatting the references.

5. Review Process

- Manuscripts are reviewed by the editorial board and may be accepted, rejected or returned to the author for revision.
- The editorial board aims to issue a decision within 30 days.
- If accepted, papers are language and copy edited by the GroJIL editorial team. Authors are consulted on these edits before publication.

6. Copyright

GroJIL subjects all publications to an 'Attribution-NonCommercial-NoDerivatives' creative commons license, available here. As such, published material may not be used commercially or changed or altered in any way, and attribution must be given to the Groningen Journal of International Law when published material is downloaded or shared with others.

7. Terms and Conditions
